About Indian Meteorological Society (IMS)

Formed in 1957, IMS is a non-profit, professional society, with its HQ at New Delhi. It has more than 3,500 life members from several research institutes, universities, user agencies, NGOs, industry and students. The main objectives of the society are:

1. Advancement of meteorological and allied sciences,
2. Dissemination of the knowledge of such sciences to the scientific community as well as the general public,
3. Applications of meteorology & allied sciences to various constructive human activities such as agriculture, land uses, irrigation, power management, navigation of sea and air, engineering and technology, medicine and public health etc.

IMSA - one of the largest societies of IMS, publishes a Scientific newsletter 'E-Megha'.
